ProQuest Nursing & Allied Health Source

Introduction

MU Libraries – September 2018
Welcome. This is the introductory screen for ProQuest Nursing & Allied Health Source database you will see upon entering from the MU Database list. Here you can learn more about the database, enter search terms and limit results to full-text or peer-reviewed journals. You also have a number of other search options available at the top. You can go to an Advanced search, search for Publications or Browse ProQuest featured content.
Here you can enter a title you want to search for, browse the list by section by clicking on the letters of the alphabet, see title coverage and holdings, narrow by source type, and more. To explore further, see the Publication Search presentation.
This is the Browse screen you will see if you click the Browse button on the toolbar. Here you have access to ProQuest featured content including Competency and Training Resources and Study Paths for nursing.
Navigating ProQuest

Note: Toolbars sometimes change slightly when you go to different screens with different options. If you click the ProQuest Logo, you will exit the Nursing databases and go to the page below where All Databases are searched by default.
Navigating to a database

The ProQuest Home page displays a number of ways for you to search; many types of resources available to search; as well as search tips, tutorials and help.

If you want to choose another database or multiple databases, or to go back to the ProQuest Nursing & Allied Health Source database, click on the Databases link on the toolbar and make your selection.

Feel free to explore other subject areas in ProQuest. To further explore Nursing & Allied Health Source, look next at the Basic and Advanced Searching presentation.
This ends the basic Introduction to ProQuest and the Nursing & Allied Health Source database.

If you have questions about Searching or Navigating ProQuest Nursing & Allied Health Source, you may see additional presentations on Publications & Alerts, Basic Searching and Advanced Searching available in this Nursing Research Guide.

You might also visit the online help available at the ProQuest website. Simply click on the HELP icon located on the upper right of every page.
